GDPR: prepare in 6 steps On May 25, 2018, the European regulation entered into force. Of many formalities with the CNIL disappear. In return, the accountability of organizations is strengthened. They must now ensure optimal data protection at all times and be in able to demonstrate it by documenting their compliance.

APPOINT A PILOT
To manage the governance of the personal data of your structure, you will need a real conductor who will carry out a mission information, advice and internal control: the protection officer Dadas. Until 2018, you can already designate a "IT and freedoms correspondent", which will give you some time in advance and will allow you to organize the actions to be carried out.

MAPPING YOUR PERSONAL DATA PROCESSING To concretely measure the impact of the European regulation on protection of the data you process, start by making a precise inventory of your processing of personal data. The development of a register of treatments allows you to take stock.

PRIORITIZE ACTIONS TO BE TAKEN Based on your registry, identify the actions to be taken to comply current and future obligations. Prioritize these actions with regard to the risks what impact your processing has on the rights and freedoms of individuals concerned.

MANAGE RISKS
If you have identified the processing of personal data that may be generate high risks for the rights and freedoms of individuals concerned, you will have to carry out, for each of these treatments, an analysis Data Protection Impact (DPIA).

ORGANIZE INTERNAL PROCESSES To ensure a high level of protection of personal data by permanently, put in place internal procedures to ensure that take into account data protection at all times, taking into account all the events that can occur during the life of a processing (e.g. security breach, management of rectification requests or access, modification of the data collected, change of service provider).

DOCUMENT COMPLIANCE
To prove your compliance with the regulations, you must constitute and consolidate the necessary documentation. Actions and documents carried out at each stage should be reviewed and updated regularly to ensure protection continuous data.
